

WHO WE ARE

The Australasian College of Sport and Exercise Physicians (ACSEP) is Australasia's pre-eminent professional body for sport and exercise medicine (SEM).

We support and represent SEM physicians, who in turn aim to improve the health and wellbeing of individuals and communities, by promoting and enabling physical activity.

With members throughout Australia, New Zealand and other parts of the world, we are working to improve the knowledge and skills of other specialities such as General Practitioners, Emergency Physicians and Orthopaedic Physicians in this new, but fast-growing specialty field.

WHAT SPORT AND EXERCISE PHYSICIANS DO?

Sport and exercise medicine is a relatively new, but fast-growing specialty. It covers a diverse range of disciplines:

- providing an accurate diagnosis and appropriate management of musculoskeletal injuries sustained during exercise
- prescribing exercise as medicine for disease management
- developing exercise programs for the relatively inactive
- managing medical problems for individuals as they exercise
- prescribing exercises to improve an individual's physical fitness and treat disease
- understanding the exercise needs of different population groups, such as the elderly, those with disabilities, children and pregnant women
- providing medical services for sporting teams at sporting events
- managing the pharmacological and ethical issues associated with drugs and doping in sport.

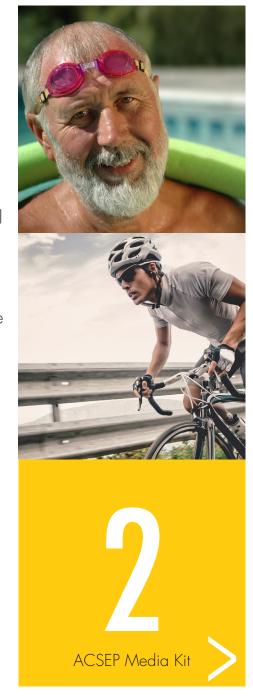

WHAT WE DO

ACSEP's primary objective is to promote world's best practice in training, standards and research in the SEM specialty. We provide training and continuing professional development opportunities and events for SEM physicians in Australia and New Zealand:

- training to become an ACSEP Fellow, covering topics such as acute injury management, trauma management, sports nutrition, sports psychology, sports pharmacology and support for clinical research
- SEM events, such as the ACSEP annual conference, regional symposiums and workshops
- fellow attendance at international SEM conferences, such as the International Olympic Committee (IOC) conference
- resources, such as ACSEP's newsletter, access to member information on our website and access to journals
- a network of peers throughout Australasia.

WHO OUR ACSEP MEMBERS ARE

We have several member segments:

Fellows - An ACSEP fellow (FACSEP) is a registered medical practitioner who has applied for and been admitted to Fellowship by the ACSEP Board of Directors. ACSEP fellows have successfully completed a four-year intensive speciality program through the College and keep their clinical skills up to date through a rigorous continuing professional development program. Many of these doctors are in private practice and are interested in opportunities to establish their reputation in this emerging specialty field.

Registrars – ACSEP registrars are doctors currently doing their training within an ACSEP training position, but who have not completed all requirements. Registrars can complete their ACSEP training in various private practice clinics throughout Australasia. These younger doctors are keen to establish and build relationships as they begin their careers in SEM.

Retired fellows – Retired fellows no longer practice, but maintain their fellowship and are involved at some level of College life. Their clinical experience and broad peer networks make them an important and influential part of our College.

Associate members – Doctors with a genuine interest in SEM can become associate members, giving them access to additional resources, education and networks available through the ACSEP. These physicians look to ACSEP for guidance and advice about SEM.

Student members – Medical students with an interest in SEM can become student members. You can engage with the next generation of SEM physicians.
